"HAPPINESS IS...viewing a baseball game through a knothole in the fence!" Angella Acuna, mascot of Carmel Valley Little League's newest Major team, "The Wildcats," undoubtedly brings back memories to Valley oldsters as she checks the dugout to make certain the team is ready for the season's opening day—Saturday, April 15. The public is invited to attend the ceremonies at the field on Paso Hondo at 12:15. The Buckeye Restaurant is sponsoring the Wildcats managed by Augie Acuna and coached by Bob Conlan. Team members include Mark Raynes, Justin Ward, Buz Fulton, Andrew Robinson, Tim McCrary, Rich Fey, Greg Raynes, Eric Hansen, Brent Eagling, Dan McDonald, Robert Creswell and Dave Patton. THE TOWN CRIER

The incumbents didn't fare very well in the Carmel city council election on Tuesday.

One - Eben Whittlesey - was defeated; another - Mayor Barney Laiolo - ran third in the eight-man race but was re-elected; the third incumbent, Frank Falge, did not run.

The two new councilmen are Gunnar Norberg, a travel agent and former councilman, and Olof Dahlstrand, an architect. Norberg ran first in the field with 863 votes, Dahlstrand had 822 and Laiolo 800. Whittlesey was a distant fourth with 706 votes and Tim Thompson, a 24-year-old MPC student, surprised with 703 votes.

Four new directors were elected at the annual meeting of the Rancho Tierra Grande Assn. on Monday evening at the Carmel Valley Manor public room. They are Dick Krueger, Doug Hudson, Dick Parker and Mrs. V.V. Parsons.

The president of the association, Frank L. Moody, said that the group plans a more active program during the coming year.

Mike Tancredi spoke to the association members present on the fire protection problem, emphasizing that better fire protection for the entire mid-Valley area can be expected within the next year.

All alumnae of national Panhellenic sororities are invited to attend a pack-your-own-lunch party at noon Saturday, April 22, at the home of Mrs. Eugene Hilton, 473 Via Del Rey, Monterey. The luncheon is sponsored by the Monterey Bay Panhellenic Group, and dessert and coffee will be served. For additional information, call 372-5729.

xxx

Counselors and instructors from Monterey Peninsula College will visit Carmel High School from 8 to 10 a.m. April 25 to explain programs available at MPC and to answer students' questions about application procedures.

MPC offers courses which are transferable to four-year colleges and universities, as well as occupational education programs that can be completed in two years or less. There is no tuition charge for California residents, and other fees are minimal.

xxx

The Monterey Peninsula Audubon Society will sponsor a wildflower trip to Huckleberry Hill in Del Monte Forest on Saturday. Participants should meet at 8:30 a.m. at the David Avenue School in Pacific Grove to pool cars before entering the Country Club Gate.

A week from Saturday, April 22, there will be a beginners' instructional trip to Toro Park on Highway 68. Participants should plan to meet at 9 a.m. at the end of the second parking lot in the park. There is a gate charge of 50 cents per car.

xxx

Frank L. Moody of Tierra Grande Drive is attending a career conference of New York Life Insurance Company's field underwriters in San Mateo this week. The three-day conference will involve training in life underwriting, health and employee protection insurance.

xxx

Gregory Granoff of Rancho Road, a freshman at the University of the Pacific, will be touring the state with the A Cappella Choir from the university's Conservatory of Music this week.

The 30-member singing group will include stops in Fresno, Bakersfield, Ventura, Santa Cruz, Palo Alto, Walnut Creek and several Southern California communities.

The Conservatory is the oldest professional school at UOP, and for more than 90 years has been among the leading suppliers of musicians on the West Coast.

AMALGAMATION

We hear a lot of argument on race or place of birth, and controversies waged about our origins on earth; but if our forebears came from apes as scientists have shown, we must admit our mugs and shapes come from the way we've grown.

As monkeys we were brothers once, both Chinamen and Swedes, who wandered far on roving hunts to feed our hungry breeds. Some chose to face the northern gale, some sought a warmer clime, which shows why some are now so pale, and some grew dark in time.

Now I am English, French and Dutch and Sudanese and Dane and Hindustan with just a touch of Irish in one vein. My mother's folks were pirate stock who ran my father's down across some
South Pacific rock: that's why my skin's so brown.

So I am neither white nor tan nor fish or fowl or game, but just a North American with just a common name; my children's children when they wed may mix us up still more, so since we're all so interbred maybe we'll outgrow war!

B.C. FORRESTER

Private funeral services have been held for Mrs. Bernice C. Forrester, a former Carmel Valley resident, who died in a local hospital last week after a period of failing health. She was 73.

Before moving to Pebble Beach last fall, Mrs. Forrester was a steady contributor to the Carmel Valley Outlook. Her column, "Cookery Corner," combined historical footnotes on food with unusual recipes for gourmet dining.

A native of Butte, Montana, she was graduated from St. Margaret's College in Berkeley. She moved to this area 10 years ago. She had been active in Grace Cathedral in San Francisco, and more recently in All Saints' Episcopal Church in Carmel.

A widow, Mrs. Forrester is survived by her brother, John M. Cartwright of Pebble Beach.

The Rev. Peter Farmer of All Saints' Episcopal Church officiated at the funeral service, which was held at Mission Mortuary. Inurnment took place at the Little Chapel by the Sea in Pacific Grove.

CVPOA vows to continue flood plain zoning fight

As far as directors of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association are concerned, the effort to get flood plain zoning applied to the floor of Carmel Valley is just beginning.

This much was made very clear last Thursday as directors rehashed the action—or rather lack of action—by the Board of Supervisors two days earlier when they refused to bring the matter of flood plain zoning to a vote on the grounds there is no strong support for it among Valley property owners.

"This is just the beginning of a long, long educational process," commented Mrs. Victoria Gibson, who had pressed the CVPOA's case before the board. "We know it will take a long time, but I think we may begin to penetrate."

The same long-range view was taken by CVPOA president Bill Brown, who said, "We've got to educate everyone. We've got to fight for it."

Brown said that he has heard from five different sources that 1973 is expected to produce "the worst flood in the history of California."

If this should turn out to be the case, he continued, "if a lot of houses go down the Carmel River, it's not going to be our fault. There are just going to be a lot of sad-faced supervisors."

Brown suggested that later this year the CVPOA might reapproach the supervisors about flood plain zoning.

"They've got the ordinances already. All we have to do is ask them to implement them for Carmel Valley."

Brown told the board that Carmel Valley is facing the prospect of almost 1700 new units, including the Odello development, which are either under construction or have applications pending before the planning commission.

"This situation has gotten so out of hand," he warned. "The board of supervisors and planning commission are granting development in this Valley when we just don't have the services for them. We don't have a resident deputy sheriff, for instance...They approve things when there isn't adequate fire protection, when we don't have the roads...

"Now I find out there's a pipeline going up from Carmel Valley to service the new development in Hidden Hills...

"It scares me. Honest to God, I'm scared about this poor Valley."

Mike Tancredi, CVPOA vice president, agreed. "I don't think anyone on this board is opposed to growth," he said. "What we want is 'rational growth' and I don't think we're getting it."

TURNING TO a discussion of the Odello development, the CVPOA directors repeated their support for the idea of some development on the eastern side of the ranch to generate tax increment funds to help pay for the western half as a public park. But directors were also unhappy about the density requested—627 units, divided into 327 residential units and 300 for a spa-hotel.

After extensive discussion, the board voted to recommend that the planning commission turn down the density requested by the Odellos and establish a lower figure consistent with the need to pay off tax increment bonds in a reasonably short period of time.

Another proposed development—a 29-lot subdivision at the western end of Garzas Road—also ran into flak from the board.

Directors were sympathetic to the views of Mrs. Edward McGlochlin of East Garzas Road, who said her neighbors objected to the additional traffic which would go across the one-lane bridge on Boronda Road, and felt that developer William Garland should provide a second access route across property he owns that connects directly to Carmel Valley Road.

Some board members criticized the subdivision layout because several lots are in the flood plain. Jack Van Zander of George Bestor & Associates, engineers for the project, said that flood plain lines would be taken into consideration in establishing floor levels for homes on low-lying lots.

The board passed a motion to the Planning Commission opposed to the tentative subdivision map on the basis of flooding and access problems.

Because of the late hour, a discussion of the controversial "G" zoning in Carmel Valley was postponed to a later meeting.

Directors also agreed that they would invite all supervisorial candidates for the fourth and fifth districts to attend a Candidates Night at the next CVPOA general membership meeting, which will be held sometime in May. Those who will be invited to give their views on a variety of issues will be incumbent supervisors Willard Branson and Loren Smith, and opponents John Sigourney, running against Branson, and Roger Poyner and Lou Haddad, running against Smith.

Palo Alto-Salinas Savings first-quarter earnings up sharply

First quarter earnings at Palo Alto-Salinas Savings and Loan Assn. reached 66c per share, it was announced by Firmin A. Gryp, president, appearing before a select group of financial analysts in Dallas, Texas.

Consolidated net earnings for the three month period totaled $1,645,903, a 37½ percent increase over the same period last year which amounted to $1,196,253, or 48c per share. "We view this period's earnings performance as especially gratifying," said Gryp, "in view of the fact that historically first quarter earnings are the lowest of the year and rarely equal those of the preceding quarter as they have this year."

A savings increase of $28.3 million for the period represented an annual growth rate in excess of 25 percent and established a new record, even exceeding the $24.9 million increase during the first quarter of 1971.

Total resources for the company reached $577,738,158 compared to $490,653,694 one year ago.

Brey Hall to be converted into library for $25,000

By SALAMAH NEWELL

THE MAIN ACTION ITEM at Wednesday night's Carmel Board of Education meeting was its approval of the plan to convert Brey Hall into a library for the Carmel High School campus. Fred Keeble, of Keeble and Rhoda, presented detailed drawings showing what would be necessary to convert Brey Hall into a library, as well as the remodeling of the present library and reserve book room into a little theater and two instructional spaces. The total cost for all work "will not exceed $25,000" according to Superintendent of Schools, Dr. Harris Taylor.

The new library will be a two-level operation, using the lower, central area as the reading area, with the raised outer portion of the room containing the shelving and librarian's check-out desk. There will be a ramp connecting the two levels, which will have a three foot difference in elevation. The two rear exists will be converted to windows, and glass may also be used in the remaining two doors to let some daylight into the now-windowless room.

Telling points in the argument for the conversion included the fact that "no structural changes will be made," as pointed out by Richard Wilsdon, so that "we're not stuck with it. We can easily take it out if we ever need to." Dr. Taylor added that when the present high school library was built "we had 300 students, and now we have over 1000." And besides all the other good points, Dr. Taylor added, "We're not asking you to move the library to Sunset Center." Still laughing, the Board voted unanimously to approve the conversion.

ANOTHER IMPORTANT ITEM was a request by the Monterey County Road Department, asking to purchase approximately 1.7 acres of the Board's Scarlett Road school site for purposes of road improvement. A point in favor of this issue is the fact that Scarlett Road would be extremely dangerous for large school buses, and would have to be improved before the site could be used for school purposes. However, as various members of the Board pointed out, the acreage which the Road Department is asking for is large and level, and very desirable for the school site itself.

In addition, the State requires 18.4 acres for a junior high school site (serving 800 students) if a playing field is included, and since the existing site is 20 acres, a loss of 1.7 acres would be leaving the District with a barely adequate site. The Rev. James Brock, chairman of the board, pointed out that the site also contains some river bottom land, so "we won't even have 18.4 acres when the river is high."

In response to the acreage problem, Mr. Wilson of the Road Department stated it was their "original intent to replace the land (needed for the road improvement) with another piece, either by purchase or condemnation of neighboring land." He admitted it was "stretching our bounds to condemn land, other than for the road," but asked the Board "not to say 'no' on the basis of acreage, because we're working on that." However, since plans for widening Carmel Valley Road may change some factors, and since the Board may not need the Scarlett Road site "for 10 or 20 years," according to Wilsdon, the Board decided to table the matter for the present time.

IN OTHER ACTION, the Board: Approved Workmen's Compensation Insurance for non-salaried volunteer workers, and added themselves to the list of such workers; selected the firm of Heckenlaible, Apger, Paik and Jennings as District Auditor for the 1971-72 fiscal year; accepted the 3.4 percent regular contribution rate method of financing unemployment insurance for classified personnel; awarded bids totaling $39,685.14 on classroom, art, health, office and custodial supplies and equipment for 1972-73, as recommended; approved a request to grant a utility easement for an underground junction box on Middle School Campus; passed resolutions requesting County audio-visual services for 1972-73, approximate cost $6,000, and County hearing testing services for 1972-73, estimated cost $2,700; passed a resolution of approval for the Joint Powers agreement, which states that the Carmel Unified School District is interested in joining with other local agencies "in establishing an agency to deal with the drug misuse problems on the Monterey Peninsula."

The Board also approved Summer Recreation Program Dates, June 26 through August 4 for Playgrounds, and June 26 through August 18 for Swimming Instruction, and authorized "the administration to submit an application for $10,000 in NDEA funds, (for instructional equipment), with the understanding that the District will match this amount."

Copies of the first draft of the 1972-73 preliminary budget were distributed, accompanied by comments from Walter Hinton, business manager, that "barring tax reform, we're in good shape, and we may even have a larger reserve next time."

IN THE OPEN DISCUSSION period, Val Williams, sophomore at the high school, reported that the cafeteria was not open before school on Wednesday, due to vandalism the previous day, and protested that their lunch tables and chairs had been taken away two months ago, also with no prior warning, and "we'd like them back." She said that "some kids have nothing else to do but throw chairs around," but that most of the students didn't commit the vandalism, and they are "tired of sitting on the floor." Val recalled that the cafeteria at Middle School was "really clean, not like the high school cafeteria," and when told that there was constant supervision at Middle School, agreed that the high school students didn't like to feel "policed" but that "we'd rather have tables and chairs and be treated like little kids than sit on the floor." Dr. Taylor suggested she speak with Principal Arthur Gumbrell about the situation.

After adjournment, the Board went into Executive Session to discuss burglar alarm systems for the new library with several contractors.

Planners OK 692 units for Odello

Override opposition for reduced development

By PAT GRIFFITH

THE MONTEREY COUNTY Planning Commission voted 7 to 2 yesterday to recommend that the Board of Supervisors rezone the eastern half of the Odello ranch for a 300-room spa-resort and 327 condominiums.

The final vote came after the commissioners rejected by another 7-2 margin a motion by Commissioner Leon Stutzman of Monterey to shave the residential development by 30 units near Highway 1, reducing the density to 597. Only Commissioner Peter Cailotto of Salinas joined Stutzman in support of his motion.

The approved density of 627 units is what the Odellos sought as the minimum they feel is required to attract developers for the property. Both the specific development layout and the density are the same as what the planning commission approved for the eastern 134 acres last July 28. At that time, the planners approved 1352 units for the entire Odello property, a proposal later turned down by the supervisors.

In going along with the rezoning request yesterday, several commissioners stated they were reluctant to tamper with the density for fear they would jeopardize efforts of the county to use tax increment bonds to help purchase the western 155 acres for public use.

"This has been a long and agonizing trail and I think we might be on the last mile," declared Commissioner Charles Kramer, a leader of the tax increment effort.

"Perhaps this density is high, but when I compare it to the density we might have had at one time, it is difficult to see that it is too high."

Commissioner Edward P. Marcucci of Carmel Valley struck a similar note.

"My greatest concern is to safeguard and keep the western half for the people," Marcucci said. "I hate to jeopardize the tax increment procedure by voting this down . . . I'm not going to be the one that sounds the death knell for this park."

UNDER THE TAX INCREMENT proposal, the county would issue approximately $500,000 in bonds to help OLAF (the Odello Land Acquisition Fund) and the State of California acquire the western half of the ranch for a total purchase price of $1.7 million. The bonds would be paid off over a period of years from the new taxes raised by construction on the eastern side.

The Board of Supervisors recently designated itself a redevelopment agency for the Odello ranch, the first step necessary in the tax increment procedure. The supervisors will need to approve the specific development plans and receive assurances of long-run economic feasibility of the project before they can authorize the sale of tax increment bonds.

It is estimated that approximately $500,000 in bonds will be needed to bridge the gap between the $360,000 in cash and pledges raised by OLAF and the $850,000 committed on a matching fund basis by William Penn Mott, jr., State Director of Parks and Recreation.

The tax increment proposal was criticized from two directions at yesterday's otherwise low-key hearing.

Bertram Rudolph, president of the Monterey County Taxpayers Association, told the commission that his organization is concerned that the plan may violate basic property rights.

"Carmel would never exist today if the controls we're trying to apply now were in existence way back when," Rudolph said.

A much stronger blast came from Commissioner Vaughn Parsons of Carmel Valley.

Stating that he did not want to impugn the motives of Supervisor Willard Branson or Commisisoner Kramer who, he said, "represent an irascible constituency," Parsons denounced the proposal to use tax increment bonds as "a great little scheme to bail out a group of people (OLAF) who made a committment they couldn't live up to."

HE CHARACTERIZED the Odello development as "a very simple zoning matter," and said that "somewhere the zoning process got lost along the way.

"It appears to me there is no great groundswell to the OLAF position or they could have raised the money themselves . . ."

Calling the western land "a piece of ground that's not even worthy to raise thistles on," Parsons said he felt it is an "absurd solution" for the county to pay $11,000 an acre for prime flood plain land located near a sewage treatment plant.

"I feel like a character out of (the story about) the Emperor's new clothes," Parsons continued. "I really feel that the western land is not pretty . . . At $11,000 an acre it's a pretty rotten buy for the public . . . If the taxpayers will go for this, then they deserve what they get . . ."

Parsons said he thinks the county faces many other problems, such as finding low-cost housing, which should take precedence over purchase of the Odello property.

At another point, in response to a question about the tax financing from Mrs. Minnie Prewitt, Parsons said that the Odello development will cost the county money because of the increased services needed by residents and tourists.

When the tax increment portion "slides out to buy a playground at $11,000 an acre, you're going to pick up the tab," he declared.

"But we do this all the time, whenever we build a library or anything," Marcucci demurred. "Of course you're going to pay. We all know that. The question is, is it worth it? And this is."

In urging a reduction in residential density, Stutzman was attempting to cut back a cluster of 68 "medium density" units proposed for a 5.6 acre site near Highway 1.

HIS RECOMMENDATION would have cut that cluster back from 12 units an acre to seven per acre, the same as allocated for "low density" clusters farther east on the property.

Stutzman also said he felt the whole project should be moved back more than 150 feet from Highway 1, the distance shown on the map, to allow for heavy screening from the scenic highway.

However, James Glaser of Del Monte Realty Co., representing two potential developers, said that a cut in density would be "cheapening the project up in terms of landscaping. Instead of using 10 gallon trees, we'd put in five gallon trees . . .

"It is a $20 million project," Glaser said, "and the thing that makes it fly is the density."

"I just can't see that 25 or 30 units makes that much difference," commented Marcucci. "But if it is going to jeopardize the project, that is very important."

The proposed 627-unit density was opposed by several groups, including the Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club, the Carmel Citizens Committee, the Monterey Peninsula Audubon Society, the Carmel Area Coalition, the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, the Rancho Rio Vista Property Owners Association, the Carmel Meadows Association and the American Association of University Women.

In almost every case, opposition spokesmen said they favored the use of tax increment bonds to help purchase the western half of the Odello ranch, but felt that the bonds could be supported by a much smaller development.

CONCERNS ABOUT TRAFFIC, water and air pollution and potential flooding problems were also raised.

Speaking for himself, newly-elected Carmel city councilman Gunnar Norberg suggested that the county follow an alternate proposal and enter into a joint powers agreement with the city of Carmel to make up the $500,000 necessary to complete the purchase of the western half.

Norberg raised the possibility that Carmel could use approximately $231,000 in its Land Acquisition Fund, commonly called the greenbelt fund, to help buy the land. This money is raised through a hotel tax.

"Wouldn't it be worthwhile to see if some kind of joint powers agreement could serve this purpose without going into a tax increment proposal?" he asked.

Norberg said he had spoken to several county officials and that no one had been able to tell him how quickly the tax increment bonds would have to be paid off.

He produced figures to show that a development of 100 homes valued at $40,000 would, when completed, produce an annual tax increment of nearly $70,000. If that were the case, he said, $525,000 in tax increment bonds could be retired within 15 years.

His comments were cut short by Marcucci, who told him: "We're not hearing this particular item today . . . I think at another time it might be more proper . . ."

"Then I ask you to reject this proposal," Norberg replied. "I think these peripheral things are at the root of the discussion."

After the hearing, Glaser said he expects to announce within a few days the names of the two developers who will work on the Odello project. One is a national hotel chain which will build the spa-resort, he said, while the other is a California-based developer who will construct the residential units. The overall development proposal was drawn up over a year ago by Sasaki Walker, a San Francisco architectural firm.

VALLEY PIONEER BOB FORD died Friday following a long illness. We are indebted to "Rosie" at the Cracker Barrel for the loan of this photo showing Bob astride his pinto, "Bomber," accompanied by a typical canine escort and a neophyte buckaroo behind the saddle—hanging on for dear life—until "Cowboy Bob" felt that he was ready to "solo." The youngster is identified as Master Horsemen, the son of a Navy family who lived in the Valley many years ago.

"COWBOY BOB," who gained international recognition as the fictitious western movie idol of Hank Ketcham's cartoon rascal, Dennis the Menace, was the real life idol of the real life Dennis and several generations of Valley youngsters who shared the privileged friendship of Robert J. Ford. Bob Ford died on Friday in a Carmel hospital at the age of 83 -- he had been a resident of Robles Del Rio for about 35 years.

He was born in San Francisco and as a young man covered a good part of the west on cattle drives and following the rodeo circuit. He established himself as a formidable wrestling opponent who traveled with carnivals offering $50.00 to anyone who could pin him in the ring--few claimed the prize money. One of the original boosters and workers for the California Rodeo, Bob was a familiar sight at rodeo time riding from the Gould Ranch in the Valley to the rodeo grounds in Salinas with a string of horses--stock which he and Happy Jack Hahn furnished for the events. An active participant in the Grand Entry Horse parade, he carried the California state flag down Main Street and to the California Rodeo grounds well into the 1960's. After that he was always a passenger in convertibles reserved for celebrities and occupied a seat of honor in the "old timers box" at the rodeo.

A charter member of the "Rosie's Cracker Barrel Gang," Bob frequently held court from the bench outside the Robles Del Rio land mark...and oh, the yarns he could spin! He knew EVERYBODY and everyone knew and liked Bob. A good percentage of the Valley youngsters took their first proud ride behind Bob on one of his famous horses--Pepper and Bomber were just two of his mounts--as well known as any Valley resident. It was uncanny the speed with which news traveled among the neighborhood small fry that Bob Ford was headed their way on horseback! His dogs were almost as important as his horses and for many years he was the Monterey County poundmaster and also hauled cattled for Salinas area ranchers.

He is survived by two sons, Robert William Ford of Spreckels and Michael John of Santa Rita. His grandchildren include Michael and David of Gilroy; Robert III of Monterey, James of Marina, Doris of Spreckles, and a great-grand child, Laura. Funeral services were held Monday at Muller Mortuary in Salinas, followed by a Requiem Mass at St. Joseph's Catholic Church in Spreckels. Burial followed in the Queen of Heaven's cemetery.

GREETINGS to their many Valley friends were sent from Anna and Gordon Harlander and their children, Cindy and Charles, via Steven Draper, who flew to Timonium, Maryland--near Baltimore--last week for a reunion with Charlie, who had been a neighborhood playmate when the Harlanders lived on Rancho Road. Steven discovered that if you are from California there are certain advantages of being the same size as your host . . . you can share the same SNOW clothes!

INITIAL COMPETITION for boys' gymnastics was held Saturday at the Mission San Jose High School in Fremont. Chip Schacher, representing the 10 and 11 year-olds from the Monterey Peninsula Gymnastics Club placed first in Vault; tied for second place in High Bars; and took a fourth place in Free Exercise. Chip, who is the son of Dr. and Mrs. Gordon Schacher, was coached for his routines by J. Munier and Shane Miller. Roy Davis, head coach of the Fremont Club, was in charge of the event.

COMPLETION OF REQUIREMENTS--ten hours of conservation work, a fity mile hike, completed in five consecutive days -- qualified 14 members of Carmel Valley Boy Scout Troop 127 for the "50-Miler Leather Patch." Accompanied by assistant scout master, Rick Powers and patrol dad, Larry Wolf, the hikers set off from Tularcitos School at 8:00 a.m. Saturday of vacation week, and hiked to the Louise Warner Ranch 14¼ miles up the Valley. They carried all of their own gear--clothing, food and utensils. The following morning their destination was 13 miles further into the Los Padres National Forest where they camped and spent a one day lay-over at Piney Creek. The "rest stop" consisted of eight hours of hard labor spent repairing the river crossing which had been washed away and a general cleanup of the area. Statistics on the latter read: "1,500 casings of spent ammunition -- including 22 shells and 12-guage shot gun shells plus 12 pounds of glass and paper."

Tuesday morning they returned to the Warner Ranch where Louise Warner may be surprised to learn that the boys worked for three hours doing rock work on creek-cut erosion on a hillside. Ask any of those 14 Scouts who rates as their favorite lady in Carmel Valley and you'll probably find that it is Louise Warner who allowed the boys to camp on her property after others had refused permission. Wednesday morning following a final check of the area they returned to Tularcitos--mission accomplished! The trip was one of the preparations the boys are making for a possible 127 mile back pack through the Sierras this summer. The miles--equal to their Pack number--would establish a state (if not a national) record!

HERB BOOTH AT TULARCITOS CARNIVAL

A NEW "FLAVOR" will be added to the annual Tularcitos Carnival on May 20th by Mrs. Leon Panetta and Mrs. Dennis Powell, who are planning an Herb Booth for the spring event. Gourmet cooks won't want to miss this opportunity to replenish their herb gardens with small pots of sage, parsley, marjoram, basil, tarragon, dill, savory and chives as well as dried mint and bay leaves.

Sylvia and Jean would appreciate the donation of any plants which may be sold through their garden shop with all proceeds benefiting school projects. Donations will be gratefully called for if you phone Mrs. Panetta, 659-3227, or Mrs. Powell, 659-4659.

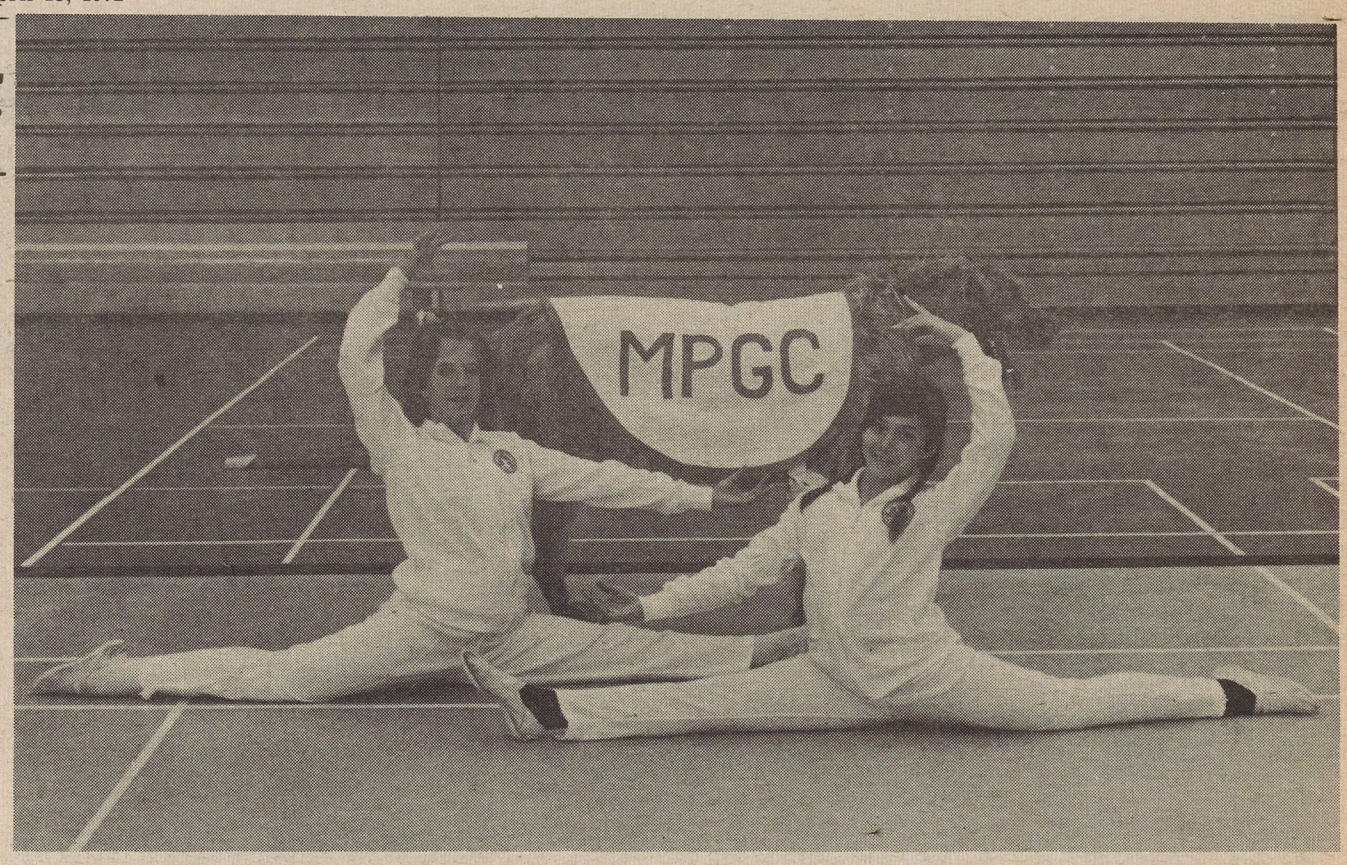
MORE OAKS & CACTI



WHEN THE NORTHERN gymnasts meet the Southern gymnasts for the State Gymnastics Championship on Saturday at San Diego State College, our area will be represented by Karen Limov (left) and Susan Schacher (with all the love and assistance one could ask for wrapped up in the Irish Wolfhound, Henry, the Monterey Gymnastics Club mascot, who will be accompanying the girls!) Compulsory routines will be held in the morning and the optional session in the afternoon. Good luck, Susan and Karen!

C.V. LITTLE LEAGUE SEASON OPENS

Fields colorfully carpeted with wild flowers and small boys capped in multi-hued team colors are harmonious symbols of the opening of another Valley baseball season with appropriate ceremonies scheduled for Saturday, at 12:15 at the Carmel Valley Little League Field on Paso Hondo. Capt. (USAF ret.) Donald Laird will serve as master of ceremonies and introduce the following teams, managers, coaches and sponsors:

MAJOR TEAMS

VOLUNTEERS: Richard McKenzie, manager, Bill Conlan, jr., coach, Carmel Valley Volunteer Fire Department, sponsor.

FARM TEAMS

WOLFPACK: Mel Stauffer, manager, Vic Harber, coach, Willard Branson, sponsor.

HORNETS: Dave Redman, manager, Roger Peterson, coach, Bank of America, sponsor.

PIRATES: Tod Gebhart, manager, Warren Kaufman, coach, Will's Fargo, sponsor.

CUBS: Dick Wenzlik, manager, Bruce Matson, coach, Porter Marquard, sponsor.

COUGARS: Joey DeMaria, manager, Barney Belleci's State Farm Insurance, sponsor.

A pre-game concert will be presented by the Tularcitos Band under the direction of John Farr. Webelos from Pack 127 will form the Honor Guard with Junior Girl Scouts and Brownie Scouts serving as standard bearers for the team pennants. The invocation will be given by Rev. James Brock of St. Dunstan's Episcopal Church. The president's message will be delivered by Roger Fulton who will introduce members of his board of directors and lead the assembled ten teams in the Little League Pledge. Guest of honor will be Jack McVey, who was a player for the Boston Red Sox from 1963-1968.

The traditonal first ball of the season will be thrown out by a popular Valley-ite who has worked for and supported youth activities and community projects throughout the years--Sam Corona.

Mrs. Mildred Hattan, chairman of the opening day program, and all of the boys and parents associated with the League extend a cordial invitation for everyone to plan to spend all or a part of Saturday at the field. Two Farm Team games are scheduled for the morning beginning at 9:00 a.m.--the Cubs will meet the Cougars followed by the Wolfpack vs. the Pirates. The major games following the ceremonies are Lions vs. Indians, followed by Wildcats vs. Volunteers.

Problems in Village escalating

Master Plan fails to locate future 4-lane bypass

By PAT GRIFFITH

THAT GRANDDADDY of ALL Carmel Valley debates--how to get traffic through or around Carmel Valley Village in the future--is about to open up again.

It will have been triggered, very inadvertently, by Harry Bell's application to put 84 apartments for senior citizens on a chunk of commercially-zoned property lying behind the Carmel Valley Post Office and the White Oaks Inn.

Just as surely as the hip bone is connected to the thigh bone, Bell's use permit for a multiple family residential development is connected to a policy of the Planning Commission permitting construction of apartments on "excess" commercial land in the Village area.

This policy is connected to a study of the Village conducted by the planning department in 1965, a study which recommended that only 50 out of the 87 acres zoned for commercial use be retained for that purpose, with the balance turned over to garden apartments.

The department's study was supposed to be connected to a master plan for the Village, which would spell out just which 37 acres might reasonably be put into this "excess" category.

And that's the point at which everything becomes unhinged. A key element in any master plan would have to be a definite route for a widened Carmel Valley Road, either four lanes side-by-side going through or around the Village, or some type of divided two-lane bypass.

A group of Valley citizens struggled valiantly with this problem in 1965 and 1966 without coming even close to final agreement on a future route for the road.

FOR WANT OF A ROUTE, the master plan was never completed, and everything just slid along until last year, when the planning commission formally adopted a policy statement that approved apartment developments not exceeding one unit per 4,000 square feet in density on "excess" commercial property.

The policy was implemented on a few small parcels without any major opposition until Bell appeared with his plans for "Casas de Paso Hondo" last month.

Bell says that the 8½ acres he hopes to buy from the estate of the late Marion Wilson are on the periphery of the Village and therefore belong in the "excess" category.

The Upper Valley Advisory Committee and the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association say the property between Esquiline and Paso Hondo Roads is adjacent to the very heart of the Village and should be held for a future shopping center or other commercial use.

Zoning Administrator Robert Slimmon doesn't know if it is "excess" land or not because there is no master plan to guide him. The planning commission is stuck with the same dilemma.

So--it's back to the drawing boards for a master plan for the Village, and back to that old bugaboo of what to do about Carmel Valley Road.

The planning commission has turned the problem over to a subcommittee composed of Edward Marcucci, Charles Kramer, Leon Stutzman and Nora Hare. The subcommittee is scheduled to come up with recommendations for revising the policy on commercial land development at the April 26 meeting of the planning commission.

MEANWHILE, the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association is putting together a citizens' committee which will represent a cross-section of the community, including representation from the Chamber of Commerce and the Upper Valley Advisory Committee. This group will attempt to go beyond immediate policy considerations and deal with the implications of a master plan.

Unless they can find community support for a future route for the road--ANY route--it is going to be next to impossible to determine which commercial property is on the periphery of the Village, and therefore "excess," and which is in the logical commercial growth area.

Unfortunately, there aren't as many options open as there were in 1965.

Two of the four alternative routes considered in 1965 cut across the property owned by Robert Bolman at the northeast intersection of Ford Road and Carmel Valley Road. When the Planning Commission considered Bolman's plans for a planned commercial development on that site last year, Planning Director Ed DeMars pointed out that approval would automatically eliminate two choices for routing traffic through the Village.

With virtually no discussion on this point, the commission approved Bolman's layout for Valley Ford, a center to include a twin movie threater.

A third possibility raised back in 1965--a new four-land road running to the north of the Village and skirting the Carmel Valley airstrip--has also been affected by decisions made since then.

Improvements made to the airstrip in the past two years, coupled with use permits granted Peter Delfino for the revitalized airport activity there, would likely preclude any chance of acquiring a strip of runway for a by-pass road.

Thus, of four proposals given consideration in 1965, only one remains feasible under present conditions. That plan called for widening Carmel Valley Road to four lanes as far east as Pilot Road, where the road would split into two two-lane segments. One would follow the present road as it goes through the Village, while the second would swing south behind the Village Center. It would then cut straight across the property that Bell wants to develop, slice through the walnut orchard at the east side of Esquiline Road where other apartments are currently under consideration, and rejoin Carmel Valley Road in the general vicinity of Rippling River.

THIS SOUTHERLY ROUTE is the one which Bob Kvenild, owner of the Village House, has favored in the past.

"We're going to have to think about a bypass road," Kvenild said this week. "It's got to come someday. And if we're talking about development of the Village area and a master plan, we need to think of this.

"And we'll need the county to help us, because it is the county that will really decide just where that road is going to go."

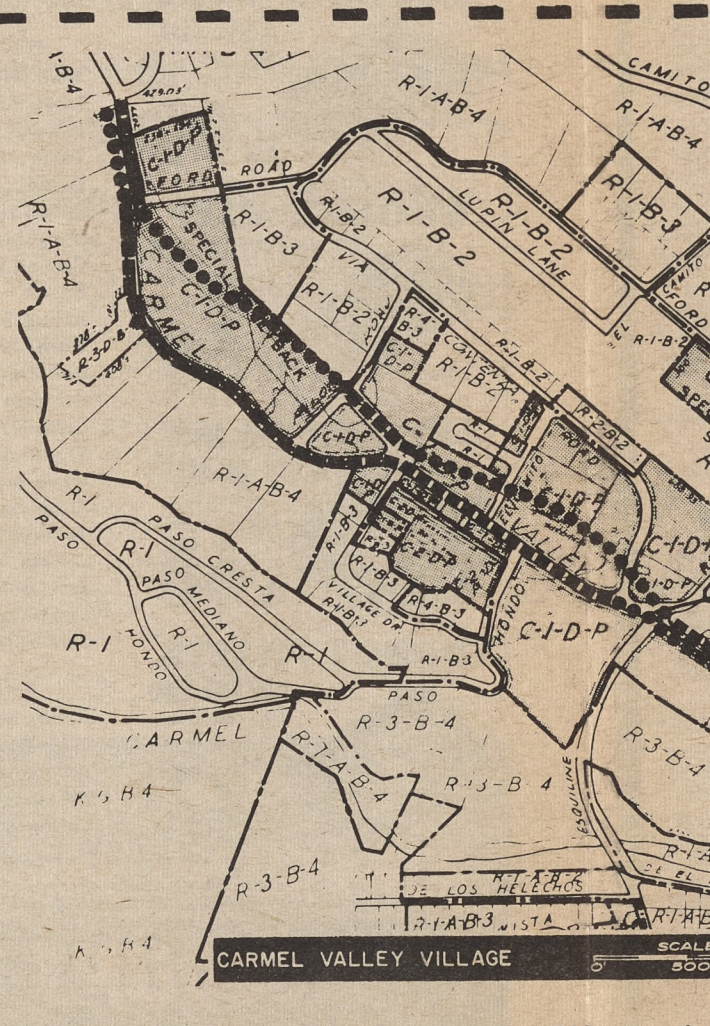
COMMERCIALLY-ZONED PROPERTY in the Village area is shown in grey on this map prepared by the Monterey County Planning Department in 1965. The dotted lines indicate one suggestion for routing traffic through the Village in the future. This suggestion would bring a four-lane road as far east as Pilot Road, where two lanes would then swing south and reconnect with the existing Carmel Valley Road by Rippling River, east of Esquiline Road. This proposal would bisect the open field behind the Carmel Valley Post Office and the White Oaks Inn, where Harry Bell wants to put 84 apartments for senior citizens.



ANOTHER ROUTE for Carmel Valley Road that was valid in 1965 -- but not any longer -- is shown on this map. This plan would have taken two lanes to the north from the intersection of Ford Road and Carmel Valley Road, linking up with Delfino Place and eventually rejoining Carmel Valley Road near the intersection with Esquiline Road. This plan, and go."

Kvenild explained that he thinks small parcels of commercially-zoned land which are "shotgunned higgledy piggledy around the Village" are appropriate for apartments.

However, he added, he would like to see the policy changed to set a maximum density of one unit per 5,000 square feet, with a requirement for two parking spaces per unit.

"I think we're just a little too tight the way it is now," Kvenild said. "We're finding that to get any open space at the 4,000 square foot density, you almost have to go two story. And I'm not against two-story construction, because otherwise you have nothing but buildings and asphalt."

Lou Gardner of the Blue Sky Lodge is someone else who has been through the road hassle and knows what it entails.

Last time, Gardner said, the Chamber of Commerce recommended a single bypass going north along the perimeter of the airport, a route which was opposed by the CVPOA.

"It all got to be such a bitter thing . . . nobody wanted to be involved in a hassle about the road, so it was finally dropped."

Gardner predicts that the arguments will be "even more bitter," now "except that people will probably be on the opposite sides of where they stood in 1965."

Gardner said he feels that the real pressure for more commercial development in the Village will come as land east of the Village up to Tassajara Road is gradually subdivided.

"IF A GOOD SIZED shopping center comes to the Village, with a chain market, people will be thinking of this area in the way they thought of Carmel and Monterey 15 or 20 years ago. They can live farther up the Valley, way up, and still be only 15 minutes from a big store."

The fact that there will be pressure against allowing commercial development farther up the Valley, Gardner said, will enhance the value of commercial zoning within the Village.

"Frankly, I'd just as soon see the whole thing kept commercial," he commented, "but that's not practicalin view of other people with other ideas."

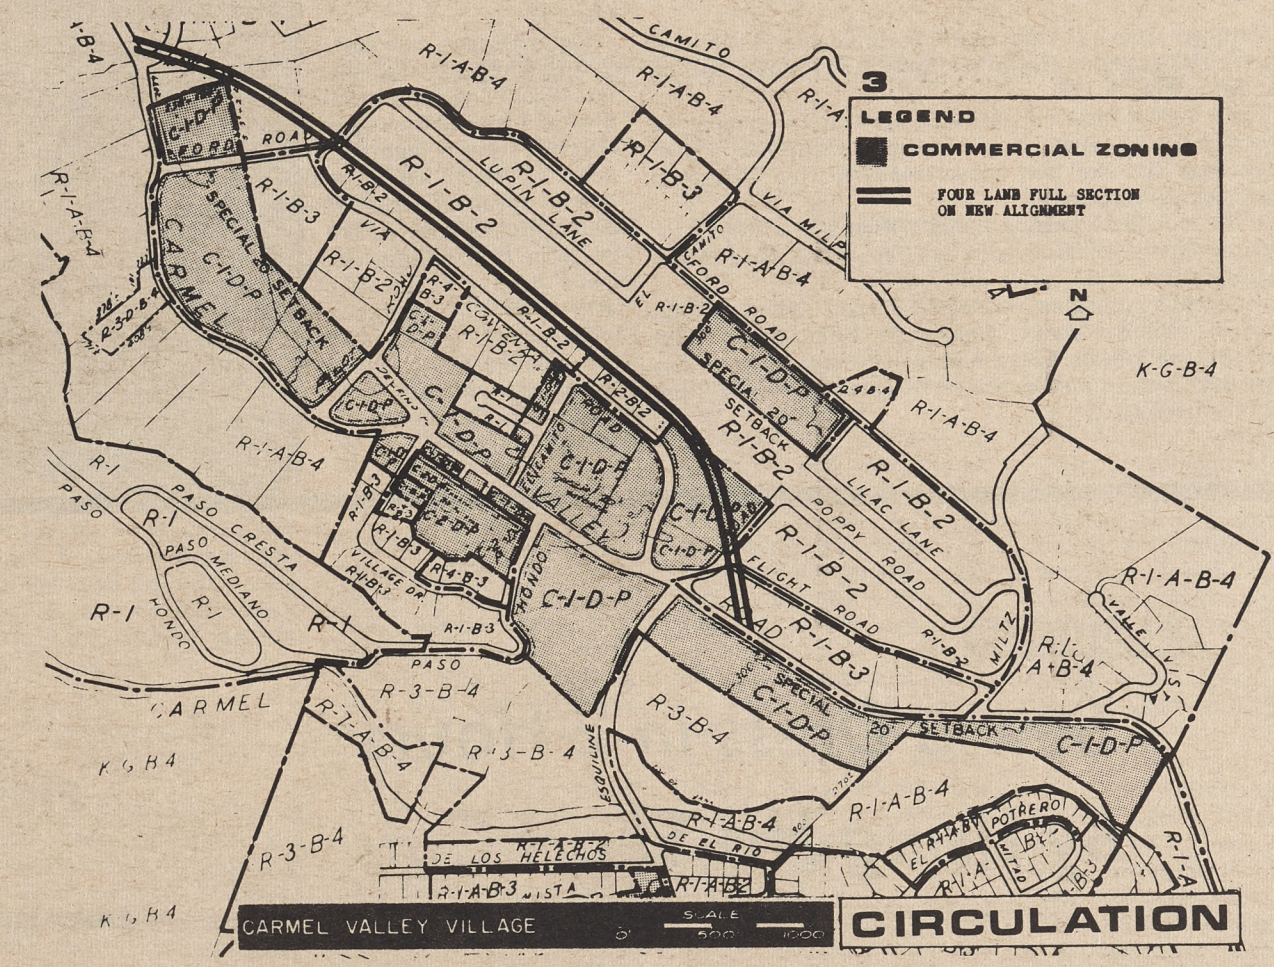
If he had to decide right now which property is "excess commercial," Gardner said he would probably include the C-1 parcels by the airport and anything west of the Carriage House, which would include Bolman's development. He also suggested that anything east of Rippling River "could be considered for apartments," but characterized Marion Wilson's property as "closer to the central core of the Village and therefore open to some question."

Skip Marquard, president of the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce, said he feels that any study "should be more than a catalogue of excess C-1 property. It ought to go into a traffic study and consider things such as lighting and foot traffic in the Village and setting aside service areas for the water company and PG&E.

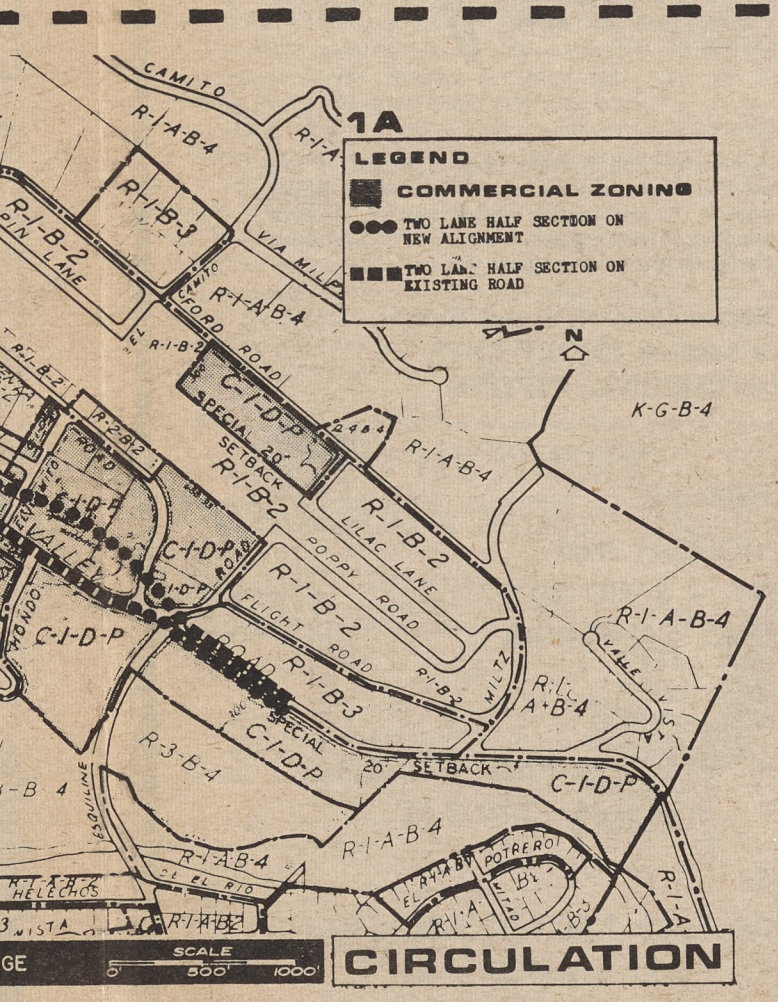
"It may not come up with a definitive answer, but I think all these things should be gone into now."

Gardner, who has offered to help with a new Village study, summed up the present situation this way:

"Carmel Valley isn't really much different from San Francisco or San Jose or Monterey as far as making intelligent plans for the future. You let things go along and then suddenly you're forced to make a choice, and at that point you're backed into something because a lot of choices have been eliminated along the way. I'd say we're approaching some kind of decision like that right now."



THE ONLY PROPOSAL for an entirely new four-lane road to circumvent the Village is shown on this map prepared in 1965. This four-lane route would slice off in a northerly direction from the base of Laurel Drive and run along the southern perimeter of the airport, eventually to rejoin Carmel Valley Road in the vicinity of Rippling River. When the airstrip was dormant back in 1965, this idea seemed as reasonable as any. But now . . .?



was valid in . This plan intersection ng up with Valley Road s plan, and another one similar to it, are now outdated because Robert Bolman has a use permit to put a planned commercial development, Valley Ford, on the northeast corner of Ford Road and Carmel Valley Road, precisely the point at which this two-lane bypass takes off.

Carmelo 4-H Club News

Members from 4-H Clubs in the North County gathered at Hartnell College for the North County Livestock Day on Saturday, Apr. 8, 1972.

There were teams from each club made up for judging the livestock. The Carmelo team, made up of Linda Wilson, Pam Oross and Kim Pearson, won a trophy for the high point Livestock Judging team.

In the individual judging Linda Wilson won a trophy for high point in the senior division and Pam Oross won a trophy for high point in the junior division.

The members judging were Ellen Brandt, Ann Coggshall, Patricia Collins, Margo Mamastar, Pam Oross, Kim Pearson, Bill Wilson, Laura Wilson and Linda Wilson. Also attending were Camille Stewart, Tamara Stewart and Tommy Bordonaro.

4-H CLUB'S MARCH MEETING

To celebrate Easter, the Carmelo 4-H Club held an Easter party at Tularcitos School's Multipurpose room on Thursday, Mar. 23.

Peggy Draper, club president, called the meeting to order at 7:30 p.m. After the role was taken and the minutes from last month's general meeting, a speaker from the Department of Fish and Game gave a speech about wildlife and the different types of animals, their tracks and how to tell them apart. During his speech he showed slides that pictured what he was speaking about. When he finished the Easter Party began. Refreshments were served around 8:15 p.m. When everyone settled down the games began. First of all five teams lined up at one end of the room and ran up and back with a potato between their knees. Each person on the winning team was rewarded a basket of candy. Next was the egg toss. The teams consisted of two partners. They tossed hard boiled eggs until they dropped or cracked them, the winning teams were also rewarded a basket of candy. At 9:15 p.m. the room was cleaned.

Baptisms Sunday at First Baptist Church

Several young people will be baptized during the 11 a.m. service this Sunday at the First Baptist Church of Carmel on Schulte Road. The worship service will center around the theme, "The Wonder of Forgiveness."

The church also has a service on Sunday evenings at 6 p.m., when music is supplied by the organ, piano and guitar accompaniment for Christian folk hymns and well-known gospel hymns. The Sunday evening studies are on prophecy, and this week's title is "Biblical Prophecy and World Politics."

On Wednesday evenings, activities begin at 7 p.m. Two classes are available. One, taught by Pastor Broyles, is on leadership training, and the second, by Pastor McBeth, is an in-depth study of I Peter. Group sharing and prayer periods are from 8 to 8:30 p.m., and choir rehearsal follows.

Friends in the community are invited to visit all of these services.

Sew a Dress in 2 Hours By Using His Short Cuts

By EDITH HILLS COOGLER
Atlanta Journal Women's Editor

"I can sew a simple dress in a day," a woman told him proudly.

Alfred Bach was horrified. It was as if she bragged about finishing the New York Times crossword puzzle in a year. That's how it struck him.

MR. BACH is a lecturer, author and efficiency expert who teaches short cuts in sewing to women all around the world; they just have to speak English, that's all.

He thinks there is no excuse for a woman wasting a whole day sewing a dress. A couple of hours, maybe, but not an entire day.

"She should throw out the instructions that come with the pattern!" he exclaimed. "They are not efficient. They advise her to pin and baste step by step when she should be racing along using short cuts; putting in sleeves without pinning and basting, for example. Matching stripes and plaids without pins, for example.

"Like lining a jacket, entirely by machine and without pinning, in six minutes."

He has a bad habit of tossing that particular line into a conversation. Women with bitter experience in lining jackets all but tear his buttons off, trying to learn the secret of that trick.

"Or putting in a zipper without a seam? Or sewing on a patch pocket by machine without a stitch showing?

"Why in hell should progress and efficiency be confined to the garment industry alone? Why shouldn't a woman get all the possible things that make sewing easy, simple, fun and correct? Everybody wants to make it hard."

Mr. Bach should know. He was in the garment industry for a number of years.

HE WAS born in England with a sort of non-stop mind that gathered a little more momentum each year. Mechanically inclined, he studied industrial engineering and was deep in time-motion studies when he chanced upon the stunning inefficiency of the fashion industry in those days. He couldn't believe it. It was like watching a woman today still churning butter for her family. There is this irresistible compulsion to DO something about the plight.

Impulsively, complusively, Mr. Bach went to work with a London patternmaker and tailor. He questioned all the traditional procedures and invented fast, new ones.

He then moved to the States to work as an efficiency expert in our garment industry. It took him a while to realize that the 40 million women who sew at home needed help far more than the industry. To help them, he struck out on his own. Besides, he likes women. He enjoys rapping with women.

HE PUTS on these lively sewing demonstrations where everybody winds up in stitches in every sense of the word.

"At first, they're very skeptical," he said. "They think the things they read about me are not possible. They wonder what I'm selling. Machines? Fabrics? But there's no mention of a product, a machine, or a fabric. They begin to realize that the only thing I do is show them fast, easy ways to sew. Then they relax and we get into audience participation.

"We ask for a volunteer who is afraid of stripes and plaids. And she gets up on the stage half-convinced she's going to make a mess of it, but good natured. But she does it! She does it! She matches the stripes or plaids in a perfect seam and she does it in full view of everybody! This wows them! Can you think of anything more devastating? Do I sound excited?" He most certainly does.

AS A DESIGNER, he has created basic patterns for adults and children. They are unique, to say the least. The adult pattern fits any woman—skinny, fat, tall short—and it is not printed on stretch paper. To make the skirt, a woman merely traces a line on the pattern from her waist measurement, 21, to her hip measurement, 50—oh, no, not 50! Well, whatever the measurement, the finished skirt fits her perfectly.

ONE ENVISIONS Mr. Bach traveling about the country with a portable sewing machine for his lecture-demonstrations, but the manufacturers are eager to lend him machines in every city. He sticks to one brand now; considers it foolproof.

This is important because the sewing demonstrations are done by audience volunteers, and the more inept, the better. He loves to demonstrate sewing tricks with little girls who never stitched anything but an apron and-it-turned-out-awful. Under his direction, these little beginners effortlessly, expertly race around a bias edging, casually mitering a corner enroute until there is an audience in need of a riot squad.

In the course of it all, Mr. Bach has written several books, using his own children as guinea pigs to make sure that the 1-2-3 instructions and drawings are as simple and clean as possible. Then he turns the instructions over to a woman who's just about average at sewing. When she sews straight through the instructions without once biting her lip, he knows it's clear.

He wears no man's collar. He is a free agent, without manager, booker, PR representative or sponsor. He arranges his own tours, which, last year took him to Australia, New Zealand and England. He does his own publicity, advertising and promotion. Recently, he packed 2,200 women into a Chicago auditorium, and in Minneapolis, in subzero weather, 1,250 persons showed up for his sewing sessions.

With the madness of a genius, Mr. Bach also invented a wildly funny sewing gimmick: A stretch tape measure.

THE FAMILIAR CINDERELLA story will be retold on the stage of Sunset Theatre tomorrow (Friday) night when the Western Opera Theater performs Rossini's "La Cenerentola." The charming opera will be performed in English in the second local appearance for the opera group, a subsidiary of the San Francisco Opera. The performance is the final offering of the 1971-'72 season of the Carmel Music Society. For ticket information call 624-2085.

Western Opera to perform Rossini's 'La Cenerentola' tomorrow night

Rossini's La Cenerentola (Cinderella), one of the most charming and witty comedies in all of opera, will be performed in English by the Western Opera Theater tomorrow (Friday) at 8:30 p.m. in Carmel's Sunset Auditorium under the auspices of the Carmel Music Society. This version of the Cinderella story is ideal entertainment for audiences of all ages.

The prolific Italian composer Gioacchino Rossini (1792-1868) wrote dozens of operas, most of them comedies, but two have held special places on the world's opera stages for more than 150 years: The Barber of Seville and La Cenerentola.

Cenerentola is about a girl named Angelina, the Cinderella of the familiar fairy tale, her family and her fairy-tale romance with a handsome prince. The plot differs from the traditional story in a few details (there is a glass slipper, but no pumpkin) and is expanded to include a more extensive sub-plot involving the two step sisters and their misadventures.

Rossini was 24 years old at the time he was commissioned by the Naples Opera House to write Cinderella. He composed with exceptional ease, and many of his operas were put together in less than a month's time. Cinderella was no exception.

Somewhat addicted to laziness and very much interested in the good life, Rossini would take up composing only under the pressure of deadlines. One famous anecdote relates how Rossini, in old age, was advised by his doctor that he had to give up at least two of the three things that interest him most in life: wine, women and song. Rossini replied that giving up song would be easy but as to which of the other two -- well, "That would depend upon the vintage!"

This is the sixth Western Opera Theater season and the second time the company has appeared in Carmel. Its production of Puccini's Gianni Schicchi and Menotti's The Medium for the Carmel Music Society two years ago was a highlight of operatic performances on the Monterey Peninsula.

The company was founded as a touring and educational subsidiary of the San Francisco Opera with the aid of a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts in Washington, D.C.

In its five seasons of touring throughout the Western United States, Western Opera Theater has brought into reality a long-cherished dream of San Francisco Opera general director Kurt Herbert Adler -- the establishment of a "grass roots" opera company of high professional caliber.

In an article about Western Opera Theater in the New York Times, music critic Howard Taubman said: "To people who have wondered whether opera has any future in America, Western Opera Theater appears to offer a fresh approach and a new hope."

Ticket information concerning the performance is available by calling 624-2085.

Sunset views:

An ongoing program

By FRANK RILEY, Cultural Director

LIFE AT SUNSET has been paced by the syncopation of hammers, saws, hammers, chisels, nails, hammers, carpentry, electric wiring - and you've guessed it - hammers. But we endure, waiting with anxious anticipation, the completion and opening of our new gallery. Work has been in progress for a week now and already we can see the new facility taking shape.

Already we are negotiating for a noteworthy exhibit for our opening event. And already we are planning suitable opening ceremonies and celebrations. The addition will greatly enhance the usability and convenience of the center and will, consequently, make it possible for us to offer more cultural services to the community. We'll keep you posted as the work proceeds. In the meantime, plan to attend the opening - about June 1st.

As an added feature of our gallery opening, we will be offering a new series of films on art called Museum Without Walls. Consisting of five two hour film presentations, the series will be presented on five consecutive Wednesday evenings at 8 p.m. in the Sunset Center Theatre beginning on Wednesday, May 31. Series tickets at a reduced rate will be avialable soon at the Sunset Center office.

Well, I just had to put that first, even though it is still in the future. More immediately, you will be interested to know that Western Opera will present La Cenerentola in the Sunset Center Theatre Friday night. It is all in English so don't let any fear of a language barrier keep you away. Carmel Music Society can tell you about tickets.

When the opera leaves the stage, Hidden Valley moves in to build the spectacular sets for Camelot and to put the finishing touches on the magnificent production which opens for five performances at 8:15 p.m. on Thursday, Apr. 20. Tickets for this show - while they last - can be obtained from Hidden Valley Music Seminar - Theatre Division at 624-6911.

Other current construction includes extensive additions to the wiring at Forest Theater designed especially for the upcoming Forest Theater Guild summer season.

At the same time we are getting together a splendid Sunday afternoon series for the Forest Theater. It will open on July 9 and continue as in past years for ten consecutive Sundays. We will be able to announce this program in May.

And the Carmel Bach Festival is coming back into action in preparation for its season which occupies Sunset during July. Rehearsals begin early in the month and concerts begin on July 21. I recall that several local people waited too long last year and so were unable to get tickets. Maybe you had better contact the Bach office now: call 624-1521.

AVILA NAMED BAND REP.

Henry Avila, chairman of the music department and coordinator of instrumental music for the Carmel Unified School District since 1967, was elected to the position of band representative for the California Music Educators Assn. at their recent convention in Fresno. He will assume his duties on July 1.

Only men welcome for Jaycees' awards banquet

The Monterey Peninsula Jaycees will present their annual "Outstanding Young Man of the Year" award at a banquet Apr. 21 at Rancho Canada Golf Course.

According to the Jaycees' press release, the dinner will mark "a return to the traditional all-male 'Bosses Night' where Jaycees and others are urged to invite their boss as their guest."

Despite the wording, a Jaycee spokesman said he does not assume that all bosses on the Monterey Peninsula are men. However, he said, if a man has a woman boss, he should plan to take her out to dinner another night rather than bring her to the Jaycees' banquet. To be blunt, she would not be welcome on April 21.

He said that the traditional all-male policy has been reinstated because last year, when the dinner was open to wives, and, presumably, women bosses, "it was a financial disaster. So there has been great pressure within the organization to return to the previous policy, when the dinners were always a social and economic success."

Besides, he noted, "there are 364 other nights a year when the Jaycees are delighted to take their wives and girl friends or women bosses out to dinner."

Guest speaker of the evening will be Sheriff Richard J. Hongisto of San Francisco.

Chairman for the dinner is Lt. Cmdr. Hank Lane. He is assisted by Ed Hulett, nominations and awards; Max Mobley, program; Don Freeman, tickets and invitations; Al Sorenson, house arrangements; and John Dunn, publicity.

SAM AND EDIE KARAS are seen in the first act of the Neil Simon hit, 'Last of the Red Hot Lovers' now playing at the Studio Theatre-Restaurant. It is an uproarious tale of a 'good citizen' who feels he's obliged to be bad—at least once in his life. Reservations are now being taken at 624-1661 and 373-7438. (photo by Steve Gann).

Circle's 'The Happy Time' opens tomorrow night

For an evening of light heart-warming entertainment, join the cast and crew of The Happy Time, when it opens at the Carmel Circle Theatre tomorrow (Friday) at 8:30 p.m. This will mark the second production to be directed by Tony Vintcent, a Canadian, by way of Dallas, Texas, who in the past few months has represented a one-man whirlwind as he assembled, coerced, begged, borrowed and invited volunteer workers to help him put the Community Theatre of the Monterey Peninsula back on the boards.

The Happy Time, by Samuel Taylor, was first produced by Rodgers and Hammerstein at the Plymouth Theatre in New York City, and is a comedy of love in three acts. The story concerns the growing up of Bibi Bonnard, a 12-year old boy, surrounded by a French-Canadian family residing in Ottawa, Canada in the early twenties. Richard Andante, well-known for his previous appearances in ingenue parts on the Peninsula, will be Bibi.

Totally uninhibited, each member of the family could be considered a "character." Papa, as portrayed by newcomer Michael Morse, is a good-humored musician, who years before had brought home a Scottish wife.

Maman, the quieting influence in this home of volatile Frenchmen, reflecting her Scotch background with tolerance and judgment, will be played by another new talent, Christine Rose.

Mason Wright, whose name is familiar to theatre-goers of the area, will age somewhat to become the perspicacious Grandpere. Milton Hayes, as the bon vivant, Uncle Desmonde, a traveling salesman, brings to the part a realistic quality of fun and gaiety.

James Goffard lives up to his role of Uncle Louis, who never lets the thought of work interfere with his daily life. Another stage veteran, Florence Larsen, will come alive as his nose-to-the-grindstone wife, Aunt Felice.

Naturally, there is a french maid, with the appropriate French name, Mignonette, played by Linda Morse. She is really a singer and out of a job when Papa hires her to help Maman. The whimsical Dr. Gagnon, with an anti-bedside manner becomes a person through the creativity of John Sullivan, an old hand in the Circle Theatre productions.

As Sally, a girl with a mouthful of braces, Carole Moreland becomes quite upset at Bibi's treatment of her. Alfred, a young bank clerk in love with the daughter of Uncle Louis, who becomes quite unnerved after his first meeting with his intended's father, will be played by young Chuck Gruwell of Pacific Grove. Dedicated craftsman, Gene Abel will match wits, against the formidable Bonnard men as the school principal attempting to deal with them and the troubles of Bibi.

The Happy Time can be seen any Friday or Saturday or Sunday night Apr. 14 through May 13. The Circle Theatre has arena staging, with all seats equally good and no seat more than 20 feet from the action. Show times are 8:30 on Friday and Saturday and 7:30 on Sunday. Rates, group rates, information and reservations are available at 624-2669 or 624-9446.

JAMES GOFFARD, Carmel Valley, as Uncle Louis is suddenly confronted with the tell-tale evidence of his wine drinking from a water cooler, in the Monterey Peninsula Community Theatre's production of "The Happy Time," opening Friday at 8:30 p.m. at the Circle Theatre in Carmel, to run through May 13. Reservations can be made by telephoning 624-2669 or 624-9446. (Photo by Jack Wood).

Two major roles still open in Forest Theater Guild's 'Twelfth Night'

Although most of the major roles for the Forest Theatre Guild's production of Twelfth Night have been cast, two leading parts still have not been filled - the Clown, or court jester, and Sir Andrew.

Guild rehearsals and tryouts are being held in Barbara West's Studio 7 at Sunset Center. The next rehearsal will be tonight (Thursday) and is called to start at 7:30 p.m.

In addition to the two key roles, three smaller parts still remain to be cast. One is "a sea captain," who can be an older person, while those of Valentine and Curio, who are identified as "gentlemen attending the Duke," are usually seen as younger men.

Principal parts in the play, which have already been assigned, are: David Hughes, who will play Sir Toby; June Ballinger, Viola; Don Ross, Malvolio; Edwin Chapman, Duke Orsino; Stephen Fry, Sebastian; and Vee Mariano, Olivia; and Tanis Martula, Maria.

Twelfth Night will open at the Forest Theater July 6, and is scheduled to play all four July weekends. It was first presented at the Forest Theater in 1911, when two memorable Carmelites -- Perry Newberry and Herbert Heron -- played leading roles.

Production staff for Twelfth Night includes: Gunnar Norberg, producer; Charles Thomas, director; Barbara West, assistant director; Cole Weston, stage manager; Adele Bramlet, costume designer; and Ruth Jordan Allen, scenic designer.

'OPEN CITY' AT M.P.C. TOMORROW NIGHT

A landmark film in the post-war Italian neo-realist movement, Open City by Roberto Rossellini, will be shown at Monterey Peninsula College tomorrow (Friday) at 8:15 p.m. in the MPC Theatre.

Open City will be shown in Italian with English subtitles. Admission is $1. Tickets may be obtained through MPC Community Services, 375-9821, ext. 335.

ALASKAN SLIDES FOR FOUNDATION

Clare Lennox will pause in her 1972 travels long enough to show colored slides to members of the Carmel Foundation Wednesday afternoon at 2:30 in Fellowship Hall in Church of the Wayfarer.

Her pictures were taken during a 30-day trip from San Francisco to Alaska by motor coach, plane, ferry boat and narrow gauge railway. During the course of the month's traveling Mrs. Lennox visited Anchorage, Fairbanks, Kotzebue and Nome, all rich in romantic legends of the frozen North.

Jon Baldwin to play King Arthur in Hidden Valley's 'Camelot'

An impressive cast list of talented actors, singers and dancers is announced for Camelot, the Lerner and Lowe musical extravaganza opening next Thursday, Apr. 20 in Sunset Theatre. It will play just five performances under the auspices of the Theatre Division of Hidden Valley Music Seminars.

Jon Baldwin has been selected to play Arthur, the king who founded a new order of chivalry with his Knights of the Round Table.

Queen Guenevere will be played by noted singer Ann Hess Pucillo, who will be remembered for her touching performance as Hodel in Fiddler On the Roof.

Terry Lester, who has performed professionally with such leading ladies as Betty Grable and Ann Miller, will sing "If Ever I Would Leave You" in the role of Lancelot.

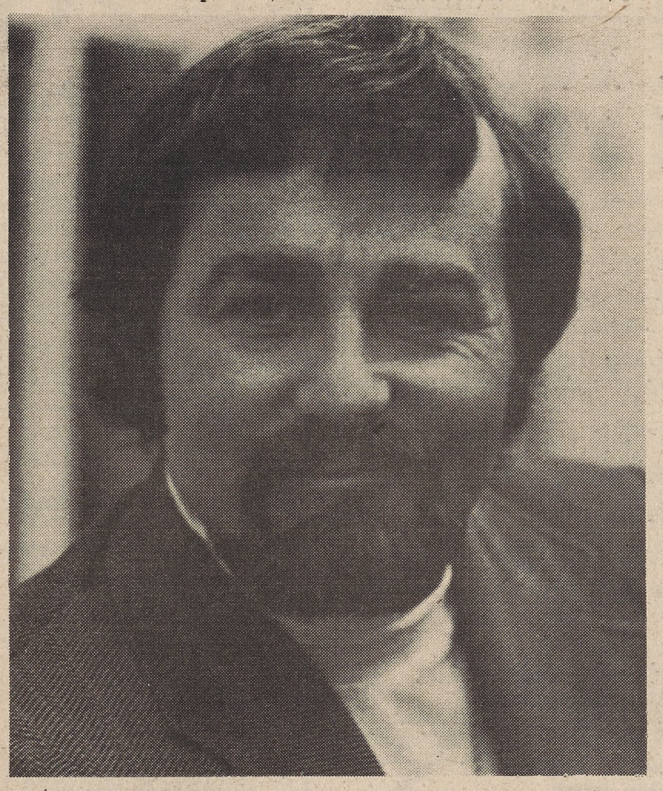
The comic King Pellinore will be played by Michael Byrne. Jack Whittaker has been cast as Arthur's evil son, Mordred, with Joyce Malikoff playing his aunt Morgan Le Fey, Queen of the Enchanted Forest.

Three shining knights who perform in the joust will be played by Erick Swaine, Michael Smith and Allan Frey. Jim Mairs has been cast as the ancient magician, Merlyn. Cast as Squire Dap is Richard Andersen, with Herman Campos in the role of Sir Tom of Warwick. Mark Oman, Lindsay Matthews and Jack McCornack will play knights.

The lords and ladies of Camelot, who comprise much of the singing chorus under the direction of John Waddell, are Debbie Alexander, Christy Botkin, Kimberly Goodhope, Dorothy Goodman, Cameron Henley, Tom Robinson, Kevin Skiles, Michael Smith, Debbie Swanson, Gertrude Snyder, Susan Ventorelli, Larry Venza, Virginia Von Hasseln and Kristin Waldroup.

The exuberant corps de ballet, under the supervision of Claudia Landon, is made up of Craig Holt Ambler, Albert Clayton, Allan Frey, Sheila Haddad, Cao Thai Hoan, Akemi Ito, Bill Kramp, Michael Smith, Nina Weisman and Renee Wurzmann.

Camelot is being directed and staged by Michael Keller, with Stephen Tosh conducting the 33-piece orchestra. Reservations for all performances are available by calling 624-6911, or by stopping by the theatre office, Room 5, Sunset Center. Performances are being given at 8:15 Apr. 20 thru 23, with a matinee on Sunday, Apr. 23.



JON BALDWIN stars as King Arthur in the Lerner and Lowe musical Camelot opening next Thursday for five performances in Sunset Theatre. It is being presented by the Theatre Division of the Hidden Valley Music Seminars (photo by Al Weber).

Song recital by Kazuko Hara

The Carmel Foundation invites members and their friends to a song recital by Kazuko Hara presented Wednesday Apr. 19 at 2:30 p.m. in Fellowship Hall, Church of the Wayfarer.

Miss Hara, who in private life is Mrs. John Mockett of Carmel, was born in Japan and began her musical studies at the Tokyo University of Art. From there she went for further study in Italy and Austria. Romance, however, interrupted the smooth progress of her career, for she and John Mockett-- also a voice student -- were introduced by a mutual acquaintance in the Standing Room Only section of the Vienna Opera House.

The Foundation cordially invites those attending the recital to return to Town House for tea at the end of the program.

'Magic Carpet Theater' coming to Sunset April 29

The Magic Carpet Theatre is this month's presentation by Hidden Valley's Children's Theatre. The Magic Carpet Theatre will take its audience around the world featuring famous folk tales from all over the globe, touching down in England, Germany, Greece, Arabia, China and Japan. The stories will be presented in the Story Theatre style, a new and exciting form of improvisational theatre for children.

The cast is hand picked. Each member is a solid stage performer interested in bringing exciting, creative and meaningful theatre to children. The demands that are made of the actor in the Magic Carpet Theatre are at least as difficult as those made by any adult presentation.

In a recent article in the Los Angeles Times, writer Dan Sullivan discussed the mediocrity of children's theater in America. Most people, and unfortunately many theatre people, regard children's theatre as a "kiddie show", a baby sitter on Saturday afternoon, he said. Sullivan hopes this attitude is passing. The Story Theatre in Los Angeles he felt was a step in this direction, showing how "thin the line is between theatre-for-children and theatre-for-adults." The Magic Carpet Theatre is committed to raising the standards here in Carmel.

There will be one performance, at 2 p.m. Saturday, Apr. 29, in the Sunset Theatre. For information call 624-6911.

Dressage trials at Pebble Beach

The United States Equestrian Team 1972 Dressage Screening Trails were held at Pebble Beach Saturday.

The event was sponsored by the California Dressage Society for the purpose of (hopefully) sending a competitor to the summer olympics in Munich, Germany, later this year.

The main event was the F.E.I. Grand Prix; and, again, Mrs. Franklyn Downton of Atherton, rode Crescendo and took top honors by scoring 54.4 percent of the possible 500 points. Second was Susan Davidge, riding Baroque, who garnered 47 percent of the points.

One of the largest crowds for an equestrian event (over 500 spectators) lined the Collins polo field for the day-long trails.

Nationally-known judges, Col. Donald Thackeray of New Windsor, Maryland; Mrs. Howard Serrell of Greenwich, Conn., and Lt. Col. Hans Moeller of Los Altos Hills, had the difficult task of awarding the percentage points to competitors who were all hopeful of going on to the final trials in the East next month.

Following the trials, judges and entrants in the Grand Prix and Fourth Level tests retired to the Pebble Beach home of Richard Collins, for a critique of their riding skills.

Smith to give Valley Chamber progress report on dam plans

Supervisor Loren Smith will be guest speaker at the Carmel Valley Chamber of Commerce luncheon next Wednesday at the Buckeye restaurant in the Village.

Smith will discuss problems of water supply and flood control as they relate to a new dam on the upper Carmel River. Smith has long advocated a major dam at the Klondike site, immediately east of the Village. This possibility is now under study by the Corps of Engineers.

Smith, who is running for re-election in June, represents the fourth supervisorial district, which now includes the upper Carmel Valley from Los Tulares on east.

'Accountability in Education' to be discussed next week

As a complete change of pace, after topics concerned with environmental and social problems, the third lecture in the "Operation Up-Date" series of Thursday morning lectures will turn to "Accountability in Education," the topic chosen by Dr Joseph L. Dionne for his discussion Apr. 20. The series, held in the Parish Hall of All Saints' Episcopal Church is sponsored by the Monterey Peninsula Branch, American Association of University Women. The public is invited to attend; there is no admission charge.

Dionne is vice president and general manager of the California Test Bureau, McGraw-Hill, located in Del Monte Research Park, Monterey. He was formerly in charge of research and development in the Educational Development Laboratories of McGraw-Hill in Huntington, N.Y. He holds the degree of Ed. D. from Teachers College, Columbia University and received his B.A. and M.S. from Hofstra University in Hempstead, N.Y., where subsequently he held the post of assistant professor in the Graduate School of Education.

Before coming west, Dionne acted as project director of the Ford Foundation School Improvement Grant and director of instruction in the Brentwood Public Schools, Long Island. His wide experience has been in demand for consultation through various councils, school districts and commissions, and in the United States Office of Education acted in the Bureau of Plans and Supplementary Centers. He is the author of a number of publications dealing with current changes and developments in the educational field.

Dionne will throw the subject open for discussion after the usual "coffee break" at 11 a.m. with a question and answer period.

The Dionnes are residents of Carmel Valley, where Dr. Dionne is a member of the Carmel Golf and Country Club and the Carmel Valley Racquet Club. His special interests are golf, tennis and swimming, and he is considered an "avid sports fan."

During the hours of the lecture, child care at no charge will be provided at the church, under the direction of Mrs. David J. Banks of Carmel. Mrs. Charles Aucutt of Pebble Beach and Mrs. Wayne Downey of Monterey are co-chairmen of arrangements for the "Operation Up-Date" series.

Lecture Tuesday night on Vitamin E and health

The miraculous health-giving properties of Vitamin E have been discussed at length recently in newspapers, in national magazines and on television.

DR. WILLIAM E. CLARK

A free lecture on "Vitamin E in Relation to Your Good Health," will be presented Tuesday night in Room 4, Sunset Center by Dr. William E. Clark.

Clark, a Las Vegas chiropractor, has a diplomate in Naturopathy and holds a basic science certificate in Nevada, Arizona and New Mexico. Hollywood College awarded him a D.C. degree.

The Tuesday night lecture is second in a monthly series presented by the Carmel Health Shop as a community service.

Patchick to speak at Gem and Mineral Society meeting

Paul F. Patchick of Pebble Beach will address members and guests of the Carmel Valley Gem and Mineral Society at their monthly meeting tomorrow (Friday) following the business meeting at 7:30, in Brey Hall, Carmel High School.

Patchick, a professional geologist and former United Nations mineralogist in Korea and Central America, will talk and show slides on "How to Know Prize-Winning Minerals."

"With the national gem and mineral show coming up in June, at Anaheim, Calif.," Patchick said, "interested club members will want to know how to select their specimens and crystals for competition."

Patchick is well qualified to discuss this subject, having been given a total of 46 awards for his collection. He is a mineral and gem judge, instructor in mineralogy, and avid collector.

Patchick will identify any specimens brought to the meeting, which is open to the public free of charge. In June, Patchick will enter his prize-winning general mineral collection in national competition against collectors and rockhounds from all over the U.S. in a show sponsored by the American Federation of Mineralogical Societies. He is a Fellow of the Geological Society of America, and holds degrees from UCLA and USC. Currently Patchick is writing a book about volcanoes.

Valley swimmers 5th best in nation

"Better even than we had hoped and much better than we expected..."

That's the way Donn Squire, coach of the Cypress Swim Club, describes the performance of his six-girl team entry at last week's 1972 AAU National Senior Synchronized Swimming Championships in Lorain, Ohio.

"We had hoped to place them at least in the top 10 in the preliminary competition," Squire says, "and qualify them for the semi-final event, but they swam so well that the judges awarded them fifth place."

Although the youngest competitors at the championships, the Cypress team entry of Kathryn Blevens, Gerri Brandly, Suzanne Calley, Debbie Jameson, Stacy Larsen and Loria Shaw were dubbed by AAU officials as a team to watch for the future.

Semi-final competition is limited to the top 10 national finalists in prior championships; first, second and third place winners of Jr. National championships; and entries from foreign countries, all of whom are already seeded. The top 10 places in the current preliminary event then move up to compete with this seeded group.

In preliminary competition, the Cypress six received a total score of 56.96, and in the semi-finals managed to increase the score to 58.26 from another panel of national judges although they received a referee's penalty of one point for one swimmer's error.

Although very similar to figure skating, gymnastics and diving, synchronized swimming is judged on a scale from zero to ten in tenths of points with ten being perfection. The Cypress team entry received an average score from each judge of 6.8 for execution and 7.0 for style to place 18th in the National Semi-Finals.

According to Coach Squire, that is almost as good as the scores received by an earlier Cypress team when they were ranked as seventh place in National Finals. "But, of course," he says, "the competition has improved greatly too."

In the preliminary solo event Kathryn Blevens placed 34th with a score of 51.99 and Gerri Brandly 38th with a score of 51.66. In preliminary duets the Blevens-Brandly pair took 19th with 53.70 and Debbie Jameson and Stacy Larsen placed 24th with 51.66.

The Santa Clara Aquamaids scored an upset victory, winning every title at the championships from the defending San Francisco Merionettes. Gail Johnson of the Aquamaids became the fourth person in the history of the sport to sweep all routine titles, solo, duet, and team, but was edged out by .08 points in the compulsory figures competition by her duet partner Terry Anderson who placed second in the solo event. Both girls and their teammates are frequent guest performers in the Cypress Swim Club's local fundraising show, the annual Aqua-Spectacular.

With a total of 168 routines entered in the competition representing clubs throughout the USA and Canada, California continues to dominate the sport having taken all seven positions in the solo and duet finals and all but one in the team finals.

The AAU National Outdoor Championships will be held at the Santa Clara International Swim Center at Santa Clara in July. Cypress will be represented at that meet by two team entries. They will also have two solos and two duets unless they can qualify additional entries at the Jr. National Championships which will be held one week earlier.

GABBY HAYES couldn't begin to equal Jimmie Bell in preparing a barbecue feast for all his friends and neighbors. He's fixing marinade for some wild boar meat. Most ranchers have stopped giving outdoor parties at spring branding time. But Bell feels that the party is what makes it all really worthwhile.

NONE OF THE 200 GUESTS had to be urged twice to delve into the hearty ranch food. Barbecued bull's head meat, spiced with a saucy relish, was served on French bread for lunch. A few hours later every was in the chow line again for wild boar chops (marinated in wine) and barbecued chicken (marinated in beer).

Garzas Road Subdivision

Map approved at Salinas

After almost two hours of debate over flood levels and road requirements, the Monterey County Planning Commission yesterday approved the tentative subdivision map for 29 one-acre homesites near the west end of Garzas Road.

The subdivision is on property owned by William Garland and a group of Los Angeles business associates, and adjoins several hundred acres on which Garland is pasturing cattle.

Much of the discussion centered around the recommendation of Loran Bunte, engineer for the Monterey County Flood Control and Water Conservation District, that the subdivision be protected against a standard project flood.

Jack Van Zander of George Bestor & Associates, engineers for the project, vigorously objected to Bunte's condition, arguing that other subdivisions lying in the Carmel River flood plain have only been required to meet the less restrictive 100-year-flood guidelines.

Commissioner Vaughn Parsons of Carmel Valley agreed. "If we continually build in these safeguards against doomsday, it just doesn't make sense," Parsons said.

The commission agreed, and unanimously voted to reduce the flood protection standards to the 100-year-flood requirements. On some lots near the river, this will require first floor levels to be slightly elevated.

Another issue raised was whether or not all traffic to the development should be routed along Boronda and Garzas Roads, both of which have single lane bridges crossing the river. Residents in the area urged that the developer be required to complete a second access route across property he owns that connects directly to Carmel Valley Road. This view had the backing of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association.

However, on two separate votes, the commission approved less stringent road conditions.

The subidvision, Rancho Del Monte No. 14, will be before the commission again on May 10 for rezoning to remove agricultural use.

Large dormitory OK'd at White Oaks Theatre

Plans for Hidden Valley Music Seminars to take over the White Oaks Theater in Carmel Valley Village as a training center for musicians and actors received a green light from the Monterey County Planning Commission yesterday.

With barely a pause for breath, commissioners unanimously approved Hidden Valley's application for a revised use permit to allow construction of a dormitory to house up to 85 students. The original use permit issued to Sally Church in January, 1964, for the White Oaks Theater allowed construction of dormitories to accommodate 50 people. The dormitories were never built.

Approval of the use permit clears the way for Hidden Valley to lease the 7.8 acre site on the south side of Carmel Valley Road in time for a summer educational program.

Peter Meckel, dean of Hidden Valley, said working plans for the needed dormitory units are now being prepared, and construction should start sometime in early May. The building has been designed by Carmel architect Olof Dahlstrand, and the design was approved in a second action by the planning commission yesterday.

The dormitory space will need to be completed by the end of July, when 74 students and 14 instructrustors are expected for a summer session lasting from July 30 to Sept. 2. Meckel said that instructors who can't live on the premises will live nearby in the Village.

The dormitory is the only addition planned in the immediate future. Eventually Meckel hopes to add dining facilities and a separate building for music reheasals on the property.

Hidden Valley expects to open a full schedule of classical theater productions in the White Oaks Theater this fall.

Until now, Hidden Valley has rented the York School campus for its summer program, and relied on Sunset Auditorium for rehearsal space and actual performances.

By leasing and eventually purchasing the White Oaks property, the group hopes to center its activities at the single location, although it expects to stage an annual musical production in Sunset Auditorium.

Supervisors to hear appeal on rock quarrying operation

David Ostrander will present a new proposal for a quarrying operation on Chews Ridge to the Board of Supervisors when he appears before them May 2 at 11 a.m.

Ostrander is scheduled to appeal the Planning Commission's denial of a use permit for a rock quarry Ostrander wants to operate on 40 of the 400 acres he owns near the entrance to Los Padres National Forest.

By a 5 to 3 vote, the planning commission turned down Ostrander's request two weeks ago for a use permit to remove 500,000 cubic yards of rock from his property. At the time he said he would limit his operation to no more than three truckloads a day, and that no trucks would be routed west on Carmel Valley Road through the Village.

This week Ostrander submitted a revised proposal to the supervisors which stipulates that truck traffic would be limited to three double-axle trucks daily which would use the Jamesburg-Carmel Valley Road west to Highway 1. The trips would be scheduled so as not to coincide with school bus traffic, the proposal states.

In addition, he proposes that an additional seven double-axle trucks be routed east through private property to intersect with the county road at Anastasia Canyon, and from there proceed through Arroyo Seco to Highway 101.

Because of these limitations on truck traffic, Ostrander said he will agree to a reduction in the total amount of rock that may be removed from 500,000 to 250,000 cubic yards.

If the use permit is approved, Ostrander stipulated he would be willing to put 200 acres of his property into a scenic easement for the duration of the use permit. At the planning commission hearing, he had indicated he would put all the balance of his property, or 360 acres, into scenic easement.

"The approval of my quarry operation would tend to reduce irresponsible waste of nature and wild life and destruction by vandalism, which has been experienced by a number of land owners in this area," he concluded.

Several residents of the Jamesburg area opposed Ostrander's application when it was heard by the planning commission on the grounds that heavy truck traffic on the narrow, steep road would create a serious traffic hazard.

The Cachagua-Jamesburg Advisory Committee and the County Road Department also recommended that the permit be denied because of inadequate roads, although Road Commissioner Bruce McClain later withdrew his objections when Ostrander promised to limit his operation to three trucks a day heading east to Arroyo Seco.

Val Verde development seeks sewer hookup

The controversial 45-unit Valle Carmel development on Val Verde Dr. and Carmel Valley Rd. will be hooked up to the Carmel Sanitary District sewer line if the district board approves an application at its May meeting.

Attorney George Walker appeared before the board at its Tuesday night meeting and made a formal request for the hookup. The board is expected to act favorably on the request. It is understood that the connection will not be made until the new sewage treatment plant now under construction is in operation at the end of October.

The board will hold an adjourned meeting Tuesday, Apr. 18, 4 p.m. at their Carmel Rancho offices because they were unable to complete the agenda at Tuesday's meeting.

Emergency Calls

The Carmel Valley Volunteer Fire Department was called to the home of Robert Willingham at 10 Sage Road at 1:40 p.m. Saturday to extinguish a small fire. Three bundles of hay and a trash pile were destroyed by the blaze, which was inadvertently set off when fireplace ashes, thought to be cold, were dumped on the pile.

The department's first aid team responded to a call for medical assistance at the home of Aquilino Zarazua at 31 Via Contenta last night. Mrs. Zarazua was given inhalation and released in the care of her own physician.

Fewer Carmel high school grads plan college careers

CARMEL HIGH SCHOOL is seeing a gradual drop in the number of students planning to go to college, high school counselor John Graham told a meeting of the Padre Parents Tuesday night. However, Carmel still expects to send about 80 percent of its graduates to college, well above the statewide average of 50 percent.

Graham attributed the downward trend to two factors—the current high rate of unemployment among new college graduates, and changing values and life styles which put little emphasis on "the hard work ethic."

Among students who are interested in going to college, Graham said, there is much more concern about the long-range prospects for specific careers now than at any time in recent history.

"I think this is also a reflection of the current economic picture," he said. "The kids are pretty aware of what's going on. Those who want to go to college will come in and ask what the prospects are in medicine, or science, or some specific field.

"And on the other hand, many of those who aren't going to college point out that a lot of college graduates today can't get jobs, so why bother?"

At present, Graham said, there is tremendous emphasis on medicine—research, para-medical teams, nursing, technicians, therapists and physicians. So many people are turning to medicine, Graham said, that he is concerned that 10 years from now there may be an oversupply of trained personnel, just as there is a great overabundance of teachers for available openings right now.

"We see a great increase across the country in the number of women going into nursing," he continued. "I think this is in lieu of going into teaching, because the teaching field is so overcrowded these days."

Out of last year's graduating class, Graham said, 45 percent enrolled at Monterey Peninsula College, 28 percent went directly to a four-year college, 12 percent found jobs, one percent went into the military, three percent (all girls) got married, and 10 percent were in the "undecided" category. Of the latter group, he said, many will eventually decide to attend college.

This compares with a state-wide average of only 50 percent of high school graduates going on to college. And of those 50 percent, eight out of 10 enroll in community two-year colleges.

Graham said that Carmel high school graduates do very well when compared with other students at MPC. Grade point averages released by the University of California last year show Carmel high school graduates with a 2.95 grade point average, compared to an all-university average of 2.89.

Only a few private colleges send back grade point information, Graham said, and this deals with so few students that it is almost meaningless.

Graham told parents it is part of his job to keep up with changing entrance requirements at a wide variety of colleges and universities, and to guide students in their choice of courses so they will qualify for the college of their choice.

Graham said that economic factors are having a major effect on where students choose to go. It now costs approximately $5000 a year to go to an Ivy League school such as Harvard. The University of California will cost an average of $2600 a year, a State college $2000 and MPC $1000 to $1300.

"Financial aid is available, of course," Graham said. "But it's not nearly as available to the middle income people in this community as to others. Those with low income are taken care of, the wealthy don't need the aid, and the middle income bracket gets caught."

Graham urged parents of college-bound children to combine a summer vacation in the student's sophomore year with a visit to various college campuses to get a first-hand feel for what they are like.

"I've seen some kids go off to a college they've never seen before and be really miserable afterwards," he commented. "It's really a good idea to check it out in person first."

Petpourri

By JUDITH A. EISNER

For openers, a short story: The Joneses, after careful deliberation, decided to acquire a kitten. Now, kittens can be acquired in several time-tested ways: one can buy a kitten, or adopt one from an animal shelter, or accept one of the neighbor's spring litter, or be followed home by a mewing waif, or awaken in the middle of a sound sleep to find a heartbroken, hungry, vociferous and emminently appealing catlet on one's front steps. Whatever the manner of acquisition, the Joneses found themselves contemplating life with felis catus.

The transition was simple, painless and joyful. Catlet ate like a horse, was box-trained with nary an accident, played with kittenish abandon and, sated and happy, curled purringly into the nearest Jones lap to sleep. The Joneses rapidly grew to love their pet and conscientiously had it inoculated and neutered at the proper time. Then, one day, after months of apparent contentment, Catlet was discovered sitting at an open window wailing pitifully. From then on, whenever a door was opened, the cat tried to dash out. Bringing in the groceries became a cat-catching chore; guests lingering in their good-nights were admonished to "Watch out for the cat!"

Unhappily, the Joneses wondered what they had done to turn their loving pet into a frustrated animal whose entire energies seemed devoted to escaping. They had sought to provide everything a cat could desire; what possessed their pet?

Sooner or later, every cat owner faces this dilemma. Ideally, as any dedicated cat book author will tell you, Puss should be kept indoors from the moment of her birth until her last, eternal sleep. Such writers go to great lengths convincing their readers—and themselves—that cats do not need to ever get closer to the sunshine than through a well-screened window. Unfortunately, 99 per cent of the cats in this world have other ideas, and sooner or later comes the day when the cat wants OUT.

As we have said often, our modern existence is fraught with peril for the free-roaming cat or dog. Enemy No. 1 is the automobile, which crushes to death hundreds of thousands of cats and dogs each year. And we doubt that even one of our readers lives so far from a road that his pet can be perfectly safe from cars.

In addition to cars, there are the dangers of other animals—cats, dogs and wildlife—and while your pet may survive a battle with them, he may be seriously mauled and torn. There are, sadly, still demented individuals who spread poison for animals, as there are unhappy children who torture them. Remote possibilities, but only remote unless they happen to you.

But the cat wants OUT, and he is spending his waking hours and your sleeping ones telling you so. What to do?

You can heave a sigh, part worry and part relief, open the door and wait to see if and when the cat comes back. Or you can attempt to leash and collar train your cat and take it for walks. You can also go out with the cat, into your yard or patio, and try to keep him in sight and hope to be able to recall him when he prowls too far. The problem is that cats, unlike dogs, have little respect for the strongest, highest fence and even less respect for your urgent commands to "come back."

Let's assume that you have accompanied your cat outdoors on his first outing. What does he do, this creature so obsessed with freedom? He finds a sandy spot, flings himself down and rolls with luxurious abandon. Next, he sniffs the rosebushes. Then he rolls again. He makes a clumsy swipe at a low-flying butterfly. Then he throws himself down in a sunny corner and takes a nap. Is that all??? You thought he had worlds to conquer, prey to hunt, mountains to climb! And should the neighbor's cat make an appearance chances are your baby will be scared half out of his wits. If all he wants is a roll in the dust and a sunbath...

Build him a cage. Ridiculous? No, quite the most sensible solution. Provide a safe, secure outdoor area for the cat, one where he can snooze in the sun, watch the birds, chase a butterfly, and still be as safe as he is indoors.

Such a cage—call it a "cat lanai" for euphemistic purposes—can be simple and inexpensive to build. Easy access can be provided through a house window which becomes a cat door. All you need is some lumber scraps, chicken wire and staples. A six foot square cube is ample for one cat; it can be made larger if space and inclination permits. The only requirement is that it be roofed over; otherwise, the cat will scale the walls easily.

A driftwood log, a tree stump, even a 4 x 4 post should be installed for climbing, perching and claw-sharpening. Some arrangements should be made to provide shade. This can be natural shade from a tree growing over the cage, or a tarp stretched over part of the roof, or a fiberglas sheet used as an awning. If your cat may be left outside in an occasional rain or wind, you can easily build a snug wooden sleeping box, enclosed except for a small hole cut for access and padded with an old pillow.

There should be provisions for a water bowl and, perhaps, a litter box. You can add these comforts if your pet will be spending enough time outdoors to warrant them. You should include in the plans a "human door," with a cat-proof latch so you can enter the cage to tidy it up.

Your cat will quickly learn to ask you to open the window for him, and you will enjoy being able to peek out to watch him, that great outdoor beast, rolling in the sand and taking a snooze, or stalking the birds outside the cage, to his heart's

Supervisors agree:

No flood plain zoning for Carmel Valley

By PAT GRIFFITH

Proposals for flood plain zoning for Carmel Valley and participation in the National Flood Insurance Program are now just water under the bridge. Or over the dam, depending upon one's point of view.

The Monterey County Board of Supervisors discussed both ideas at great length last week and came to the same conclusion it has reached on previous occasions—that there isn't enough public support behind either measure to bring it to a vote.

Tuesday's hearing was called at the request of the Carmel Valley Property Owners Association, which has long been on record favoring flood plain zoning for appropriate areas of the floor of Carmel Valley.

More recently, the CVPOA directors have been urging the supervisors to consider applying for coverage for Monterey County residents under the National Flood Insurance Program.

To qualify individual property owners for this low-cost insurance, the county would have to agree to apply flood plain zoning to all flood-prone areas of the county, whether or not residents in the affected areas wanted this zoning.

The reason behind the insurance program, the supervisors were told, is that the federal government is tired of bailing out flood victims with massive amounts of relief assistance, only to have them turn around and rebuild on a flood plain again. By offering the subsidized insurance as a "carrot" to local governments to apply effective flood plain management, the government hopes to reduce the number of repeat disasters and lessen the need for major flood control projects.

However, supervisors expressed concern that the "carrot" isn't worth the restrictions which would be placed upon the individual homeowner.

They pointed out that if a home already existing in the primary flood channel suffered a loss by fire or any other calamity of over 75 percent of its assessed value, it could not be repaired or rebuilt in the same location. If the home were located in a Flood Plain 2 or 3 zone, adjacent to the river but not in the main channel, the home could be rebuilt providing it met standards for flood protection.

SUPERVISOR Loren Smith repeated his opinion that a better solution to the problem of flood control for Carmel Valley would be a combination water supply and flood control dam at the Klondike site just east of the Village. He said he would be opposed to any recreational use of a Klondike dam.

"I don't want to talk about that dam site," Supervisor Willard Branson interjected amid laughter.

Mrs. Victoria Gibson, secretary of the CVPOA, detailed the CVPOA's arguments in favor of flood plain zoning for the Valley.

She cited the 1970 County General Plan for the Carmel Valley area which recommends that a combination of "flood plain zoning and control appear to be one of the best methods to prevent future damage to future projects...(and that) planning of commercial and residential use of the flood plain should be in formance to the known hazards of the Carmel River."

She urged the supervisors to enact an interim flood-plain zoning ordinance for the Valley, and then refer the matter to the planning commission for study and public hearings on the precise application for FP 1, 2 and 3 districts.

"Inasmuch as we already have the prospect of 1000 units of Valley subdivision development staring us in the face, and cannot even speculate on what might be on the drawing boards, it would seem that the time is more than ripe for passage of an interim ordinance that would help give us an opportunity to bring reasonable order to the development of this extraordinary and precious area," she said.

Attorney Louis C. Moore, representing several Valley residents opposed to flood plain zoning, contended that "we're going endlessly around and around on the subject of water and the river...it's a can of worms in which we are swimming."

Moore termed the idea of flood insurance a "negative concept" and said there is strong opposition to the insurance program in Carmel Valley.

To emphasize the point, he submitted petitions signed by over 300 persons whom he said were against inclusion in the federal insurance plan.

"I believe the only positive approach to this question is a dam in the Carmel Valley," Moore declared. "Unless you have a dam to provide water in the future...it is sinful to stand on the banks of the Carmel River and allow that water to flow into the bay."

Moore said that his clients "do not want their lives run by Washington," and urged that the hearing be "the start of positive action towards the building of another dam in Carmel Valley."

ANOTHER attorney, Brian Finegan, also spoke against flood plain zoning.

Finegan said he was representing many property owners in the middle and lower Valley who feel the insurance program is "philosopically wrong" and who oppose flood plain zoning because it would have "tremendous impact on developers with developments underway and on individual homeowners."

Among those urging adoption of an interim flood zoning ordinance for the Valley were Earl Moser, representing both the Ventana Chapter of the Sierra Club and the Carmel Citizens Committee; Ken McGinnis of the Carmel Area Coalition; Frances Gaver of the League of Women Voters; Bill Brown, president of the CVPOA; and a representative from Hacienda Carmel.

One Valley resident, John Cunningham, told the supervisors he was one of the "innocent people" who purchased a home by the river in the summertime.

"If my place is flooded out, I would just love to have that flood control insurance," he commented.

After listening to all the arguments, Branson said he felt the main thrust behind the requests for flood plain zoning is to restrict development in the Valley.

Noting that he had not even been able to get support from Valley residents for an ordinance to protect the Carmel River, Branson observed: "I serve at the will of the people...If it can be shown that a majority of people in Carmel Valley wish to have this (zoning) implemented in Carmel Valley, I will bring this to the attention of the board...but I haven't had a majority opinion supporting that viewpoint. In fact, it has been the opposite."
